DETAILED ACTION

Claim Rejections - 35 USC § 103

The following is a quotation of 35 U.S.C. 103(a) which forms the basis for all obviousness rejections set forth in this Office action:

(a) A patent may not be obtained though the invention is not identically disclosed or described as set forth in section 102 of this title, if the differences between the subject matter sought to be patented and the prior art are such that the subject matter as a whole would have been obvious at the time the invention was made to a person having ordinary skill in the art to which said subject matter pertains. Patentability shall not be negated by the manner in which the invention was made.

Claim 11 is rejected under 35 U.S.C. 103(a) as being unpatentable over Yamada et al. (US 5986377, previously cited) in view of Rich (US 4102040). Yamada teaches a stator comprising: a cylindrical core (Fig. 1, #12) including a plurality of slots provided around an inner circumferential face of the cylindrical core and notch portions (Fig. 1, #13a) provided around the inner wall surface of only some of the slots (as seen in Fig. 2, every slot has a notch portion except for the slot with the welded portion); and a coil disposed in the slots (Fig. 2, #18), wherein each of the notch portions comprise a linear slit extending only partially through the cylindrical core in a radial direction so that the cylindrical core has a lower radial crushing strength at the notch portion than at other portions of the cylindrical core (which is inherent), but it does not teach a plurality of concave portions provided around an outer circumferential face of the cylindrical core or that the cylindrical core is iron. However, Rich teaches a cylindrical stator core (Fig. 17) with a plurality of concave portions (Fig. 17, #26) provided around an outer circumferential face, and iron stator cores were extremely well known at the time of the invention. It would have been obvious to one of ordinary skill in the art at the time of the invention to modify the core of Yamada in view of the concave portions as taught by Rich because they provide a means for reducing the weight of a stator core while also permitting effective cooling of the stator by the circulation of air there through (Rich, Col. 11, Lines 30-36). It also would have been obvious to one of ordinary skill in the art to form the cylindrical iron core of Yamada in view of Rich from iron since it has been held that one of ordinary skill in the art at the time the invention would choose a suitable and desirable material, because it would be within the general skill of a worker in the art to select a material on the basis of its suitability for the intended use as a matter of obvious design choice (In re Leshin, 227 F.2d 197, 125 USPQ 416 (CCPA 1960)).

Conclusion

Applicant's amendment necessitated the new ground(s) of rejection presented in this Office action. Accordingly, THIS ACTION IS MADE FINAL. See MPEP § 706.07(a). Applicant is reminded of the extension of time policy as set forth in 37 CFR 1.136(a).

A shortened statutory period for reply to this final action is set to expire THREE MONTHS from the mailing date of this action. In the event a first reply is filed within TWO MONTHS of the mailing date of this final action and the advisory action is not mailed until after the end of the THREE-MONTH shortened statutory period, then the shortened statutory period will expire on the date the advisory action is mailed, and any extension fee pursuant to 37 CFR 1.136(a) will be calculated from the mailing date of the advisory action. In no event, however, will the statutory period for reply expire later than SIX MONTHS from the date of this final action.
